Positive Behaviors at Home

A great aspect of PBIS is that the same expectations we work on at school can carry over to their home behavior. It's always a great idea to remind students of ways to use these positive behaviors and learned techniques. Below is a chart that shows examples of how students can use these rules at home. Also check out the positive starters column - reminding students of what they are doing right is the key!

Positive Behavior Intervention Support

A term you will hear (or may have heard already) this year at Awbrey Park Elementary is Positive Behavior Intervention Support - also known as PBIS. PBIS is an approach to behavior management on a school-wide level targeting specific settings such as the playground, halls, cafeteria, classroom, or with individual students.

To help ensure the success of all students, it is essential that parents become familiar with our school rules and behavior expectations. Working together as parents and educators, we can help build a positive climate and culture here at Awbrey Park.

Our basic school rules are meant to be simple, clear, and easy for students to remember. For each rule there are examples of how that rule is applied in various school settings. Examples of some of the expectations for behavior in each school setting are written out in the behavior grid, included in this brochure.
